

EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE
Self-awareness

Self-awareness

100%

of people with high levels of resilience are self-aware

88%

of people with average levels of resilience are self-aware

26%

of people with low levels of resilience are self-aware

Types of Self-awareness

INTERNAL SELF-AWARENESS

- How clearly we see our strengths and weaknesses, values, personality, passions and aspirations.
- How we fit with our environment.
- How we react in terms of thoughts, behaviours and feelings.
- The impact we have on others.

Internal self-awareness is generally associated with higher job and relationship satisfaction, personal and social control and happiness.

EXTERNAL SELF-AWARENESS

- How other people view us, in terms of how others see our strengths and weaknesses, values, personality, passions and aspirations.

People who know how others see them are more skilled at showing empathy and taking others' perspectives.

Asking for feedback is the most important aspect of self-awareness.

Benefits of Self-awareness

Research suggests that when we see ourselves clearly, we:

1

Are more confident

2

Are more creative

3

Make better decisions

4

Build stronger relationships

5

Communicate more effectively

6

Become more effective leaders

The Importance of Self-awareness in Building Resilience

'Self-awareness is fundamental to building resilience because it acts as the foundation for understanding and effectively managing your emotions, thoughts, and behaviours in the face of adversity.'

1

Recognizing Stressors

Identifying triggers helps you develop strategies to manage stress effectively.

2

Understanding Emotional Responses

Awareness of emotions allows constructive processing, preventing impulsive reactions.

3

Evaluating Strengths & Limitations

Leveraging strengths and acknowledging limits helps set realistic goals and seek support.

4

Fostering Adaptability

Understanding what works enables flexible responses to change without compromising well-being.

5

Building Emotional Regulation

Self-awareness improves emotional control, keeping you calm under pressure.

6

Improving Decision-Making

Considering both external factors and internal states leads to better choices.

7

Strengthening Relationships

Effective communication and empathy foster strong support networks.

8

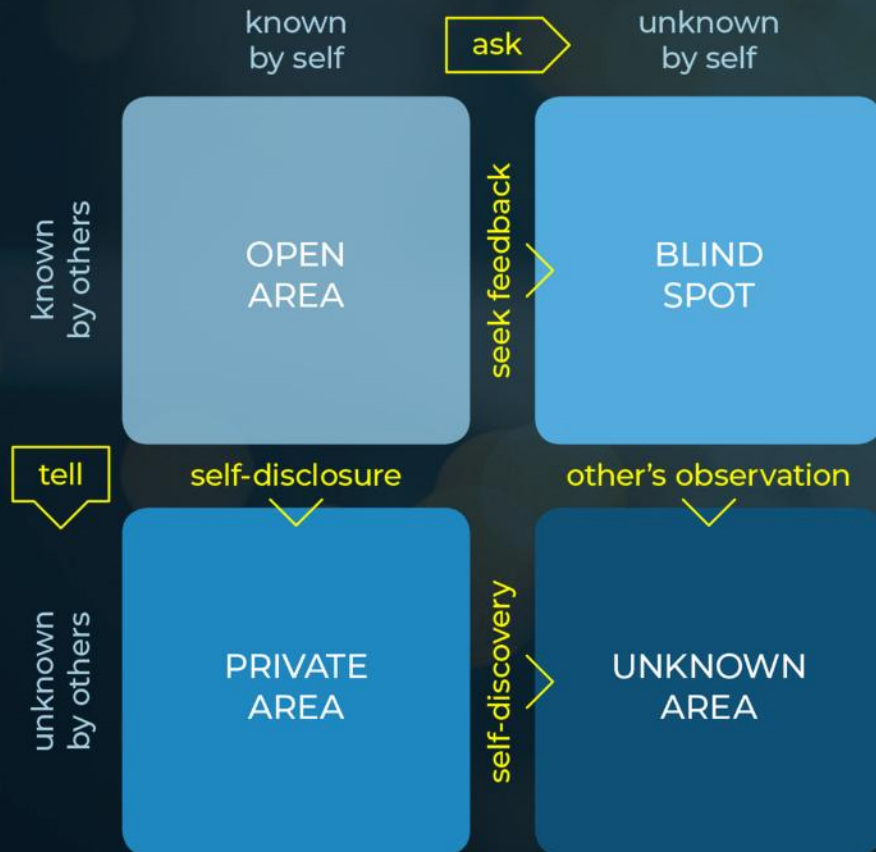

Cultivating a Growth Mindset

Recognizing negative thought patterns helps reframe challenges as growth opportunities.

Self-awareness allows you to approach challenges with intention and clarity rather than reacting impulsively. It helps you tap into your inner resources and align your actions with your values and goals, which are essential for building resilience.

Importance of Feedback

The Johari Window Model

1955 Joseph Luft and Harrington Ingham

The model is based on 2 basic concepts;

Trust can be built by revealing information about yourself to others.

You gain unknown and often insightful information about yourself from the feedback you receive from other people.

EXERCISE

ACTIVELY SHARE

Share information about yourself with colleagues to expand their understanding – be vulnerable.

Ask them to share feedback on how they see you, your strengths, weaknesses and other insights.

Developing a Personal Brand

? What is a personal brand?

A personal brand is a widely-recognized and largely-uniform perception or impression of an individual based on their experience, expertise, competencies, actions and/or achievements within a community, industry, or the marketplace at large.

Why is a personal brand important?

What is your personal brand?

Developing Your Personal Brand - Best Practice

Be authentic, be yourself.

Think about what you stand for, e.g. fairness, integrity, respect, honesty.

Live your values every day.

'Show me, don't tell me'
– actions speak louder than words.

Build your network and identify and manage the key stakeholders.

How can you increase your visibility?

Here are some ideas;

- Indirectly by recognising success of other members of the team.
- By speaking at customer/internal events.
- By asking a key stakeholder to become an executive sponsor and working closely with them.
- By working on important projects outside of your own area.
- By asking a key stakeholder to become a mentor.

Self-awareness

EXERCISE 1

Identifying Strengths, Weaknesses & Core Values

Write down your top 3 strengths, your 3 key weakness and your 3 most important core values, then answer these questions.

How do you leverage your strengths in the role that you perform today?

Refer to the 'Understanding Strengths' sub-facet materials

What strategies do you employ to address or mitigate your weaknesses?

How do your values govern how you live and work? Are they aligned?

Refer to the 'Values' sub-facet materials

Self-awareness

EXERCISE 2

Increasing Self-awareness

3 exercises to increase self-awareness:

Reflective Journaling

- What to Do: Set aside 10–15 minutes daily to write about your thoughts, emotions, and experiences. Reflect on what went well, what didn't, and how you felt.
- Benefits: Helps identify patterns in your emotions and behaviour, revealing triggers and responses.
- Tip: Use prompts like “What am I grateful for today?” or “What challenged me today?”

Seeking Feedback From Others

Refer to 'Feedback' sub-facet materials

- What to Do: Ask trusted friends, family, or colleagues for honest feedback about how they perceive your behaviour, strengths, and areas for growth.
- Benefits: Offers an external perspective to complement your internal reflections.
- Tip: Be open and listen without defensiveness, focusing on learning.

Track Your Triggers

Refer to 'Stress Triggers' sub-facet materials

- What to Do: Keep a log of situations where you felt stressed, upset, or reactive. Note the event, your reaction, and the outcome.
- Benefits: Identifies recurring patterns and triggers, enabling proactive responses.
- Tip: Reflect on alternative responses that might have improved the outcome.