

SELF-EFFICACY | EXERCISE 1 & 2

Exploring Self-Efficacy Through Reflection

Self-efficacy refers to your belief in your ability to carry out tasks and handle challenges effectively. It influences how you approach goals, handle setbacks and persist through difficulties.

In this exercise you will reflect on two types of experiences: one where you succeeded in a task, and another where you chose not to take something on.

1Analyse a Success

Think of a situation where you were successful in a task, project or challenge.

Describe the situation. How did it make you feel? What learnings did you take? How did it impact your ability to take on the next challenge?

2Analyse Declining a Task

Think of a situation where you declined to take on a project or a task or a presentation.

Describe the situation. What were you feeling?

By exploring what contributed to your success or decision to decline, you can gain insight into the factors that shape your confidence and decision-making processes.
